A PRINCELY SWINDLER.

The Fall Mall Gazette says: "A swindler of a really high order of ability has lately brought a brilliant career to a close at Moscow in the person of an ex-prince, Demetrius Tschawitsch, who has been levying contributions at a dozen of the chief towns in Europe, London being especially mentioned, with continued success. The Prince never changed his very unpronounceable name or his story, after the fashion of those more vulgar impostors who contradict themselves by the frequency and multiplicity of their inventions. He was always a Russian Prince, had always been robbed just before leaving Vienna, by a young man he had unfortunately taken into his service as secretary, was always expecting a large remittance from St. Petersburg, and was meanwhile in the closest relations of intimacy with the Russian Ambassador. It followed that he was for the present unable to pay the bill he had run up at the hotel which he had honored with his choice, and was further in want of a new secretary, to whom he could promise a fine future career and a large salary in immediate prospect. So plausible was this adventurer that at Berlin he not only left one of the chief hotels without suspicion before his remittances arrived, promising to send payment of his account, but included a number of petty tradesmen's bills from London, but carried off with him to that metropolis his landlord's son, whose little purse, of nearly fifty pounds, his new master borrowed from him, leaving his victim just enough to go back to Berlin with, when he was presently ordered there to await the Prince on his way to Russia. On the young man's departure the Prince, who had been introduced to some Russian means, borrowed £300 from one, according to the statements made in the Moscow Court, and with this booty went off to Paris. Here, again, he borrowed from Russians on the strength of his alleged intimacy with their ambassador at Berlin, but disappeared on learning that inquiries were being made about him owing to a warning sent from the capital. Having tried all of the European courts out of his own country he appears to have sought refuge in Moscow, but here his career ended. He was arrested on suspicion, and presently identified with one Lufieff, a non-commissioned officer, who deserted some months before. For this desertion the said distant Prince now lies awaiting trial, but his swindling is now only incidentally mentioned."

SINGULAR VERDICT.—A remarkable verdict was recently rendered by a Boston jury. The extensive fire in that city in 1873 began in the furniture establishment of Haley, Morse & Co. The insurance on this property aggregated $70,000, distributed among different companies, several of which refused to pay on the ground that the firm had invalidated their claims by the use of naphtha, it having been expressly stipulated in the policies that no naphtha, benzine, or other volatile oil should be used on the premises, except by written permission endorsed on the policies. A test case was agreed upon, the Columbia Insurance Company of Boston being made the representative of the other companies, and tried in the United States Circuit Court. In an investigation ordered by the Boston City Council to discover the origin of the fire, both Haley and Morse had testified that no benzine or similar article had been used on the premises for killing moths or any other purpose; but in the Court it was proved that when the fire occurred the floor of the store was being sprinkled with naphtha, of which a number of galleons had been bought only the day before, the object being to kill moths. It was also proved that a fire had been started on the same premises some months before through the same cause, and the bookkeeper of the firm swore that he had obeyed the instructions of Mr. Haley in erasing from the books after the last fire the entry showing the purchase of the naphtha which caused the destruction of $2,000,000 worth of property. Notwithstanding this testimony, the jury returned a verdict in favor of the claimants, which was set aside by the Judges as unwarranted by the facts and evidence.

LOSS OF AN AUSTRIAN WAR VESSEL.—The Austrian man-of-war Saida perished in a violent storm off Messina on the night of the 30th of November. A private letter, describing the catastrophe, speaks in the highest terms of the conduct of the commander and his crew on the occasion. After the ship had struggled in vain against the storm for several hours, it became evident that she could not hold out much longer, and the commander, Lieutenant Trapp, ordered her, about 5 p. m., to be turned toward the shore, in the hope of finding a suitable place for a landing. At half-past one o'clock the ship struck, and the crew, who were calm throughout as if they were engaged in a "naval maneuver," went up into the rigging to wait further orders. The commander then directed them to take off all their clothing, and at a given signal to jump in the sea. He was the last man who left the ship, and shortly after she heeled over and sank. When all hope of saving the ship was lost, all her officers went to the commander to thank him in the name of the crew for the masterly way in which he had performed his duty, and to assure him of their implicit obedience. There is no doubt that it was chiefly owing to the exemplary discipline maintained on board the ship that the crew were saved. One man only was drowned and he jumped into the sea with his clothes on, contrary to the captain's instructions.

A Paris letter says of Cassagnac, the duello journalist: "One of the poorest writers on the press, he seldom gets into a controversy without being worsted; so that, wounded in his self-love, he loses his temper, and tries to wound his opponent with the point of the sword. He is conspicuously incapable of the neat phrases and epigrammatic points his brothers of the quill are famous for. He is addicted to very long articles, full of heavy, awkward sentences, virulent adjectives, and brutal abuse. A born bull, he has committed so many outrages that he really deserves extermination. If he had lived in America, he would have been killed long ago."

NOTICE.—Our bills will be ready for delivery January 1st, and we hope that our friends will give them prompt attention.

WASHINGTON, D. C.,
SELL THE BEST

DOLLAR CORSET

IN THE CITY.
Dress Makers recommend it as being the best Corset to fit a dress over, because it is cut in such a manner that the front and back seams fit like seams to a dress.

And it is superior to any other Corset now in use because its peculiar style of cutting gives sufficient fullness at the bosom, without folding at the top; gradually and closely fitting to and over the hips, is longer front and back than ordinary Corsets, and in fact is the only Corset cut in this form.

In addition to the DOLLAR CORSET will be found a large assortment of other makes at the following prices—$1.25, $1.50, $1.75, $2.50, $3.50 and $5.
